

2022 LMU FAITH & JUSTICE CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT GRANT OVERVIEW

Loyola Marymount University is committed to the service of faith and the promotion of justice (<https://www.lmu.edu/about/mission/>). The pursuit of social justice in its many forms is a distinctive feature of the traditions of all three of LMU's sponsoring religious congregations (the Society of Jesus/Jesuits, the Religious of the Sacred Heart of Mary, and the Sisters of Saint Joseph of Orange). Inspired by these traditions, the LMU community dedicates itself to reflecting critically on the sources of systemic oppression and marginalization and finding ways to remedy suffering while cultivating an anti-racist inclusive climate as part of our struggle for justice. Central to this mission is the promotion of innovative curricula as well as research and creative activity.

The call to justice has become definitive of Jesuit higher education in recent decades. In 2000, Father Peter-Hans Kolvenbach, Superior General of the Society of Jesus, urged universities to make space for what he called “the gritty reality of this world” to enter into our lives so that we can “learn to feel it, think about it critically, respond to its suffering, and engage it constructively.” In recent pronouncements, this attention to justice has been defined particularly in terms of the need for reconciliation with God, with one another, and with Creation, that is, the natural world. In emphasizing the importance of reconciliation for achieving justice the Jesuits thus find alignment with the Sisters of Saint Joseph of Orange, for whom reconciliation is a prerequisite for justice “so that all may be one,” in the words of their motto taken from the Gospel of John.

In seeking justice, then, members of the LMU community, regardless of their own faith commitments, are encouraged to look to the vast resources offered by the Catholic Church and LMU's sponsoring religious communities and by other faith traditions in informing their own disciplinary approaches to justice. This grant opportunity invites faculty to integrate issues of faith and justice—and an understanding of social justice consistent with LMU's Mission Statement where we regard and treat each other with respect, recognizing the inherent dignity and immutable humanity of all peoples, made in the image of God —into their teaching.

Every year, up to five grants will be awarded to continuing full-time faculty at LMU. Faculty may submit an application to develop courses that:

- (1) integrate faith and/or justice within course content,
[For example, faith and justice curriculum development might include aspects of Ignatian pedagogy, Catholic Social Teaching, Critical Race Theory, etc. integrated into existing courses, or the development of an entire course that integrates issues of faith and justice.]

- (2) focus on faith and/or justice issues and integrate these with community-based learning and course content,
[Community-based learning (CBL) is a pedagogical method that requires students to engage in organized service activities, critical analysis, and guided reflection that enhance both the academic objectives of the university curriculum and the social needs of the larger community. Through CBL, our students and faculty are able to engage all three dimensions of the LMU mission in a focused and integrated manner (the advancement of learning, the education of the whole person, the promotion of faith & the service of justice). Moreover, the overarching themes of Jesuit education are well served by the essential components of CBL: academics, direct service, reflection, mutual transformation, and assessment.]

In previous years, faculty from different colleges have been awarded for topics in curriculum development such as:

- Exploring Ethics and Bias in a Machine Learning Graduate Course (2021)
- Legal Advocacy for Faith and Justice in Schools (2021)
- Improving Spatial Skills of Undergraduate Engineering Students through Authentic Learning (2021)
- Immersed in Urban Oil: Documenting Los Angeles Petroculture (2020)
- Ignatian Theatre Pedagogy (2020)
- Economics of Prisons (2019)
- A Better World: Explorations of Place & Purpose (2019)
- Health & Social Justice (2018)
- Change the World Filmmaking: Foster Children and Prisons (2018)

2022 LMU FAITH & JUSTICE CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT GRANT Checklist and Guidelines

Proposals are now being solicited for the 2022 LMU Faith & Justice Curriculum Development Grant. Faith & Justice Grants are available to continuing full-time faculty to enhance existing courses or build new courses that meaningfully incorporate faith, justice and/or community-based learning. Five grants of $5,000 are available this academic year.

Please follow the grant application procedures in this document, paying careful attention to key dates. To submit your application, please contact Yesenia Vargas, Faculty Affairs (OFD@lmu.edu) for access to the BOX submission folder (Faith & Justice Curriculum Development Grant Applicants 2022).

All application materials must be uploaded to BOX by 5:00 PM on February 8, 2022.

Chair or Dean:

- Recommendation letter. A recommendation letter from the Dean or Department Chair should be uploaded to BOX or emailed to OFD@lmu.edu.

ELIGIBILITY:

- Faith and Justice Curriculum Development Grants are awarded only to continuing full-time faculty who are teaching full-time during the grant period.
- Successful applicants must have a commitment to continue with the University for the following academic year. If a recipient fails to sign his or her contract with the University for the following academic year, the grant will be automatically revoked.
- Faculty are eligible to apply every other summer. If, as a continuing faculty member, you were awarded a 2021 Faith and Justice Curriculum Development Grant, you will be ineligible to apply for a 2022 Faith and Justice Curriculum Development Grant. However, you may apply to one of the other 2022 LMU Internal Summer Grant competitions.
- Faculty taking a sabbatical may apply for a Faith and Justice Curriculum Development Grant either the summer before or the summer after their sabbatical.

FUNDING:

- The award is $5,000. Eighty percent of the grant ($4,000) will be awarded through payroll in late May. The remaining 20% ($1,000) will be awarded in early November, upon receipt of a satisfactory final report.
- Accept award via e-mail (ofd@lmu.edu) by April 1, 2022 at 5pm.
- Faculty may only accept one LMU internal grant each summer. In addition, faculty may not accept another internal grant for the same project.
- If two faculty members agree to work on a joint project, grant funds will be split.

Award recipients will be required to submit a final report of their grant activities with an attached updated course syllabus by October 14, 2022.

If you have any questions about these application procedures, contact Cathleen McGrath, Chair of the Faculty Committee on Mission and Identity (Cathleen.McGrath@lmu.edu) or the Office of Faculty Affairs at ofd@lmu.edu.

Name: _____

Title: _____

College/School: _____ Dept.: _____

Campus Building: _____ Suite/Room#: _____

E-mail Address: _____ Campus Phone: _____

II. PROPOSAL NARRATIVE (3 pages maximum):

Include a narrative description of the proposed course. No more than 3 single-spaced pages. Use 11-point font or higher with one-inch margins, and please number your pages. The description should indicate whether the course is undergraduate or graduate level, intended as core or major course, and whether the course is envisioned as type #1 or #2 (refer to grant description).

If type #2, the narrative should also contain an explanation of the community-based learning component. Community-based learning includes the following: 20-30 hours of off-campus service, on-site placement that engages the deliverance of social services or policy advocacy in non-profits, and a mutually beneficial exchange of knowledge and resources in a context of partnership and reciprocity. For type #2, meet with Daveon Swan, Associate Director Community Based Learning, Center for Service and Action (Daveon.Swan@lmu.edu or 310.338.8529) before submitting a proposal with a community-based learning component.

For such projects, please indicate: (a) how faith, justice, anti-racism, and/or community-based learning will be integrated into the course content; (b) how the addition of these component(s) will deepen academic content and how they will be integrated in course learning outcomes and assignments.

A timeline for the work required to transform the proposal into a detailed syllabus should follow the narrative as an additional page. Please indicate when you will teach the course (Fall 2022, Spring 2023, Summer 2023).

III. CURRICULUM VITAE (3 pages maximum):

Attach a curriculum vitae, no longer than 3 pages, which includes a list of pertinent publications, performances, exhibits, or films. Include also a list of previously taught courses that might be relevant to the proposed course.

IV. LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION (1):

Applicant must request a recommendation letter from their Department Chair or Dean. The letter should focus on the applicant's pedagogical sensibilities and strengths, the connections between the proposed course and the wider programmatic objectives of the applicant's Department or School, as well as, support for teaching the course in academic year 2022-2023. It can be uploaded to BOX by the candidate along with the faculty member's other application materials or can be emailed directly to Yesenia Vargas at OFD@lmu.edu.

*Support for faculty developing courses with community-based learning can be found within LMU's Center for Service and Action, which has ongoing relationships with community agencies in the Los Angeles area, organizes and facilitates service programs, and coordinates service placements for community-based learning courses. Grant applicants who are proposing to include a community-based learning component are required to schedule a meeting with Daveon Swan, Associate Director Community Based Learning, Center for Service and Action (Daveon.Swan@lmu.edu or 310.338.8529) before submitting a proposal with a community-based learning component.
